

POETRY.

FROM THE BOSTON POST.

The following song cannot but be admired for its literary merit, however it may be censured for its sentiments by political opponents:

A NEW WHIG MELODY.

Listen, my lads, to the joyful intelligence,
Hear it proclaimed, "A millionaires at hand!"
N'er did such tidings, by mail or by diligence,
Promise relief to a perishing land.
Trade will revive now, as sure's you're alive
now;
No more speculation shall slumber and sleep;
Democracy totters, quite weak on her totters,
And nothing henceforth shall be plenty or cheap.

Scan not the motives of man or of minister;
Never inquire if he's honest or true;
Whigs have no views that are selfish or sinister;
No love for money or power—but for you.
A bank, we'll obtain it, a tariff, we'll gain it;
With these, and a debt, we have nothing to fear.
Though oft we've been cheated, it won't be repeated—
Hurray for a tariff, and every thing dear!

Trust not the locus for sense or sincerity,
All about nothing they make such a fuss;
Leave them to prate of "the farmer's prosperity!"
What are the farmers and workers to us?
Give us high prices, for nothing so nice is;
Of all foreign fabrics we'll make a clean sweep.
The poor shall pay double, and so, without trouble,
Though they sow the field, yet the harvest we'll reap.

Farmers, go hear our itinerant lecturers:
Only by them is the thing understood;
Quickly make way for the proud manufacturers;
Doubling their prices is all for your good.
No fact can be surer, "if once you're made poorer,
The freer, the richer, the nobler you'll grow!"
For house, food, and raiment, the greater your payment,
The more you'll have left, as you very well know.

Shout for a bank, while you've breath left to call
for it;
What it may cost will hereafter be seen;
Protection we want, and you louder must bawl
for it;
We know, though you don't, the thing that we mean.
Hazza for confusion, deception, delusion,
Log-cabins, hard-cider, and that sort of thing!
The locus are under, the whigs free to plunder,
And we shall be blest with bank, tariff, and KING!

The subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public generally, that he has taken and fitted up the House on the south-west corner of Hillsborough street, in the City of Raleigh, opposite the State Capitol (formerly kept as a Tavern) as a HOTEL and HOUSE OF ENTERTAINMENT, for the accommodation of travellers and others, under the name and title of

The undersigned has had considerable experience as an inn-keeper, both in the State and at the North, and flatters himself that he can please those who shall honor him with their custom. His charges shall be in conformity with the times and the prices of provisions.—
He has been at much expense in repairing and refitting
the same, and therefore earnestly solicits a share of public patronage. It is usual in such announcements, to make large promises to the public, which are in many instances never realized—the subscriber will make none, for to those who have known him as a Public House keeper, it is unnecessary; and to those who do not, he would respectfully say, come and try, and judge for yourselves. The Public's humble servant,
